Who can forget the pomp and circumstances of Red-skin traditions? The pep sessions? The joy of a hard-won game? Who cannot recall the memorable prom evenings? These things have left fresh imprints that, with passing, will turn to fond reminiscences. This is North Side.

And with each activity and custom at North, there are people. The people who are the clubs, the people who attend the dances, the people who are in the classes, the people who are called friends.

Just as the events of North Side 1963 are fixed in the Redskins' memories, so are the people connected with them. For without the people, these events would not be.

There's that "special someone;" that favorite teacher who symbolizes the student's ideal; the guy who always slouches in the next seat. These too are North Side. They have stamped their character traits in a blend with our own.

The people, the events, the traditions — these are what we have met; these are now a part of us.

Redskins Find Confusion Reigns King as New System

For the third year green sophomores entered triumphantly through the senior door only to be ejected and placed on their knees beside the red carpet.

Within the school the usual locker trouble, class hunting in the circular corridors and lipstick smearing was confused by the new split schedule system.

Upper classes watched the entering 900 with awe and discovered that squeezing through the halls was harder than ever with the alltime high enrollment of 2,100.

Teachers braced themselves for the 180 school days which were bound to be longer under the new schedule. All appraised their new classes with the usual apprehension and interest realizing that they in turn were being looked over.

As they squeezed through the doors at the end of the day, 2,200 sophomores, upperclassmen, and teachers decided that in 1963, the key word at North Side would be togetherness.

The traditional initiation to sophomores by seniors is being given by Vicki Jornod, Carole Laws, Joe Hagadorn, and Steve Pence to defenseless sophomore, Phil Martin.

Hanging the senior banner is also a tradition the senior boys followed on the opening day of school.

of Scheduling Makes Opening Day Debut

Helen Hallien assists homeroom teacher Mr. Lee in handing out first of the countless cards which Redskins fill out in a year.

The opening day assembly consisted of a discussion on student body "neatness in appearance" and the introduction of new faculty members. It was climaxed this year as varsity cheerleaders led the student body in the school song.

Domeland Activities Offer

Chance for Student Initiative, Leadership Ability

For parents who have to beg and threaten to encourage their offspring to do anything beyond the barest minimum of homework, it is hard to imagine these same Redskins conducting an animated club meeting or shouting a basketball team on to victory. But it's done every day. Sleep-starved scholars drag out of bed, hoping to survive breakfast. Some seven hours later they give pep talks, draw election posters, sell dance tickets, and attend two-hour play rehearsals.

This year a student was forced to select a reasonable load of activities from three elections, four proms or parties, as well as innumerable club meetings, after-game dances, concerts, sports events, Hi-Quiz programs, pep sessions, assorted speech contests, and journalism trips — all these being optional activities. As always, a few people tried everything.

All was accomplished without parental prodding and with a minimum of threats from teachers.

"The 'Skins are gonna have their day, tonight' sing the senior boys during the pep session before the South Side game.

As class elections for juniors approached, Lynne Schubert and Mary Sayles hung campaign posters for their candidate.

Students Seek Diversion from Teachers and Homework

Jeannie Sargent and Patty Johnstone have a sneak preview of their culinary masterpiece.

Disproving the notion that this country's youth are inactive and lazy, numerous Redskins spent their "leisure" time in a round of hardly peaceful activity.

Ardent fun-lovers seldom waited for the week end, but carried their cheer into the classroom. On week ends Pokagon State Park was the site of tobogganing and ice skating when it was cold enough. The promise of a ski-run in the northern part of the state sent expectant skiers to the sports shop or attic for their equipment. In spring a few spartan swimmers ignored the chill to take a plunge in their former skating rink.

On Friday, after the football or basketball game, those who had remembered to buy their tickets under the new closed-dance system of the Student Council went to the after-game hop. Saturday morning was a time for greasing the car, hemming a dress, and preparing for Saturday night. Saturday night meant a slumber party, a dance, a movie, a hayride, a burger and fries, a hello to Sunday morning. Later Sunday morning was church.

For some, leisure time meant a chance for a nap or a quiet session with a book—a moment to recover from the rest of the week. But for many, sleep became a forgotten word as they were forced to forego their rest to engage in active "spare time."

Administration Finds Welcome Aid in Student Help

Nancy Quinn keeps both hands busy at once, tending the phone and typewriter in Mrs. Young's office.

Efficiency and office skills were sharpened when students assisted in offices and classrooms around the school.

The guidance offices employed clerical crews who helped say a cheerful good morning to those who call the school, search the files for the exact spot for a student folder, mimeograph files of announcements, and take messages. In study hall an army of girls exercised their best penmanship in taking attendance while boys exercised their walking apparatus in picking up absence slips. Other boys worked in the athletic office watching over the valuables of pupils in gym classes.

Days running from seven to four o'clock made student graders necessary in some classes. Students filling this capacity gained new appreciation of their teachers' work and found that principles of grammar and physics are long remembered after a person corrects them two-hundred times on a theme or physics test.

North Side would have been a harder place to keep running without help. Rather than feeling that they were purely charitable, students had to admit that the jobs were valuable to them also.

Helping Mrs. Coomey in checking the morning's absence reports are these study hall assistants.

Judy Dennis helps Mrs. Louise Vannatta run the counter set up to feed the overflow of customers during extra-crowded lunch hours.

Cash, Careers Lure Redskins to Jobs in Community

All learning is not in books, nor in school. Vitalizing this time-proven belief, many students sought work experiences, for experience and cash, outside of school.

Volunteer problems at the city's hospitals yielded experience in a medical atmosphere. Through a similar program at the Fort Wayne State School, Redskins wrapped gifts and performed other services according to their talents.

Of course, there were paid jobs. With an answer to the business world riddle of How-can-you-get-a-job-without-experience-and-how-can-you-get-experience-without-a-job, the Junior Achievement companies attracted a substantial sprinkling of North Siders. By responding to calls from employers to the Guidance Office, Redskins baby-sat, wrote letters for a new citizen who needed help with the language, and read to a handicapped youngster. Other people got jobs through their own leg work or through help from the Youth Employment Service in the summer. Whatever the job, experience was its own reward.

A job many Redskin males found profitable, as Dave Stillman has, is sacking groceries in local supermarkets.

Laurie Popp, Joan Yoder, and Becky Lotz fold instrument tray towels in their work as Nursettes at Parkview Hospital.

Individual Hobbies, Varsity Varieties

Mountain Lassies, Susie Gramling, Jane Woodings, and Connie Hanes try to convince Jim Jewell and Roger Haverfield that it's "Sugartime."

Boasting acts that ranged from an old-fashioned minstrel show to a harrassed husband fearfully trying to teach his wife the fundamentals of driving, the "Dixiebelle Showboat" flashed past the North Side landing midst a shimmering spectacle of lights and colors.

Presented in two acts, the show opened with the entire company vocalizing "Swanee," and "Alabama Bound." Highlights were two modern dance numbers, "Danger Man" and "Steam Heat;" a song-and-dance number called "Mississippi Mud;" an unusual treat from Scotland featuring a bag-pipe solo; and a humorous, yet effective-sounding boys' quartet in "Tropic Tropics."

As the curtain rose on the second act, the audience found some gals from the hills trying to convince the bearded gents that it was "Sugartime." An attempt at magic followed, and ended with the magician knotted in a strait-jacket. An unusual dance number, spotlighted by clever lighting techniques then demonstrated the dancing talents of several Redskins. The predicaments facing those who travel by air was satirized in the skit, "The High and the Flighty." The second half was a singing one as vocal solos enthralled those watching, while the climax was reached in the unique finale, "Dream Fantasy."

Help Special Skills and Interest Bloom

Who can tell what hidden talents lurk within those friends seen daily but never really known?

Perhaps the student in the next seat in algebra is secretly composing a symphony, or writing a mystery story or searching for the perfect shade of blue to complete his landscape. Maybe a person's hobby is less hidden — collecting matchbook covers, knitting sweaters, building model aircraft. Other students find joy in the popular diversion of reading.

Some spare time activities cause problems. Where is one to store a quarter of a ton of rocks? How is a worried mother convinced that scuba diving is absolutely safe, and good exercise, too? When can a person find time to dig under those stacks of priceless magazine articles on ice fishing, or hi-fi records, or Hungarian recipes or books on modern art to find a history paper or tardy theme?

True, hobbies are sometimes a nuisance; but they also help to lend a spark of individuality to those, who, like many others, have no claim to fame besides studying.

Amateur geologist Jerry Bryce shares his discoveries with Rusty.

Noel Patton pauses to contemplate his wealth in rare coins.

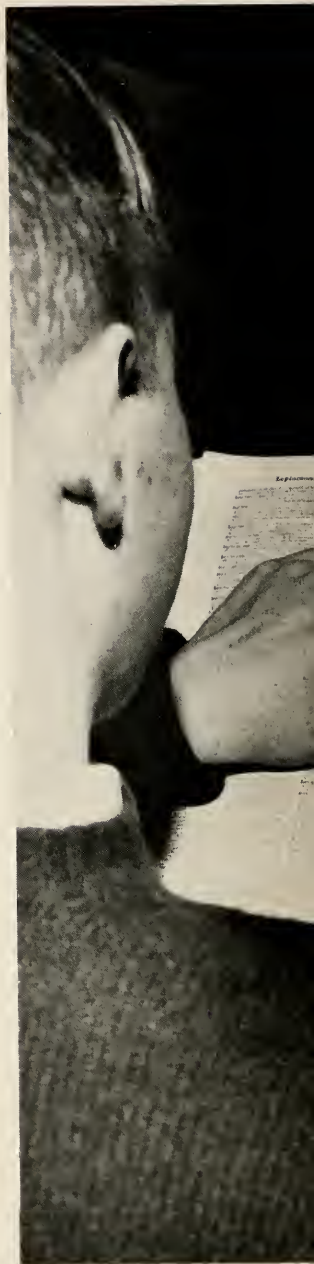

Carolyn Doughty and Chris Tigges prove that modern woman has retained some of her traditional skills, among them, sewing.

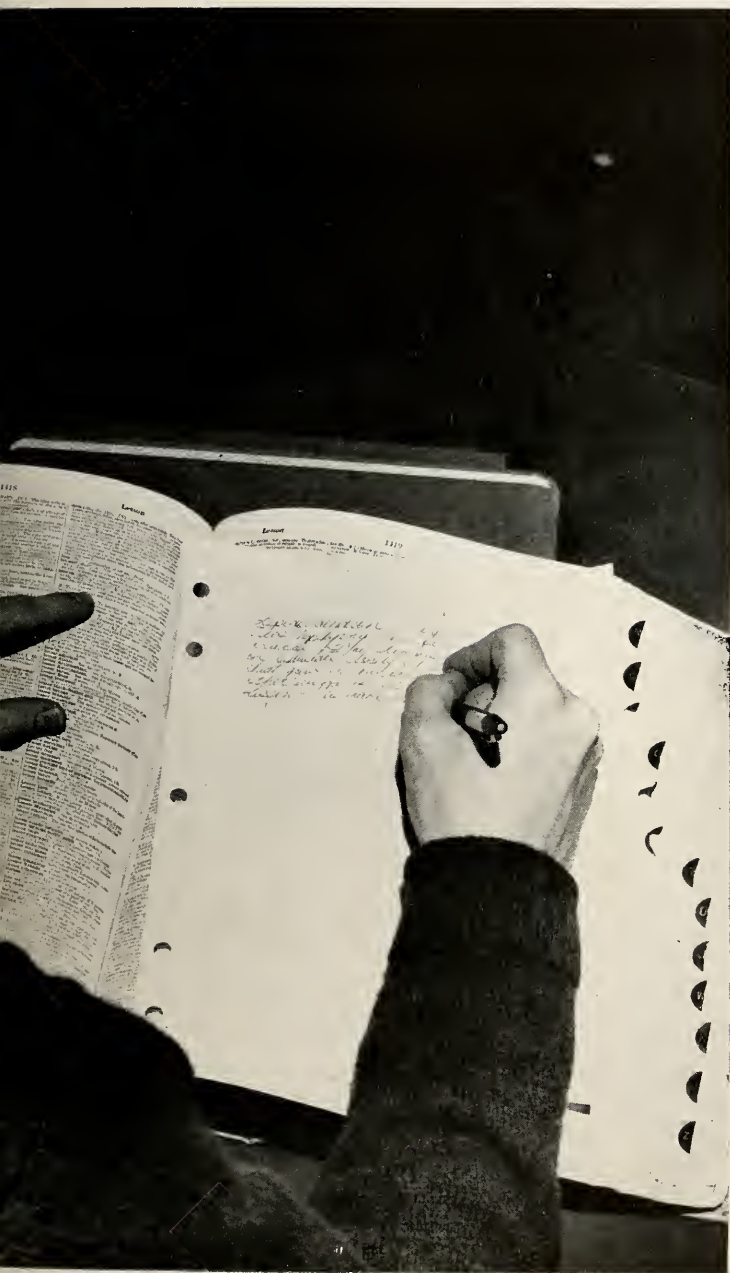

From the moment an individual enters a kindergarten classroom for the first time to the day on which he completes his formal education, his mind is being trained to think and reason. As he progresses from a small child to an adolescent and finally to an adult, his teachers and his text books are guiding him into and qualifying him for the role of a responsible, mature member of society.

Although Redskins seek to develop themselves socially and physically as well as mentally, it is the academic aspect of the high school years which is the reason for the existence of the school system; and in this direction students' greatest efforts should be aimed.

The hours of working at home and listening attentively in the classroom are not spent uselessly, for the knowledge acquired becomes a part of each North Sider, preparing him to meet better the challenges of the future.

The classroom is transformed into a realistic setting as these four amateur actors, making use of authentic costumes and props, perform the short play, "Dust of the Road," before fellow English 7 students.

English Scholars Develop Literary and Verbal Skills

Rich Fryer, like many other upperclass English students, spends much time in the school library as his term paper deadline approaches.

To increase students' abilities to use the English language properly and effectively, North Side offers eight semesters of English. With the exception of the seventh semester, in which literature alone is studied, English courses concentrate on the fundamentals of grammar, composition, spelling, and literature. Diagramming sentences, writing themes, and taking weekly spelling tests are a few of the methods by which students become more familiar with these principles.

Redskins seek to enrich their literary knowledge by studying writings varying from the classic epics of ancient Greece to contemporary poetry. The Odyssey, Macbeth, Silas Marner, Julius Caesar, and Tale of Two Cities are some of the works covered in the course curriculum.

Floor talks, term papers, and book reports are assigned to give pupils the opportunity to make use of their knowledge of English and to teach them to think logically and to organize material. Some class periods are spent in the library, during which time pupils gather material for larger compositions. Listening to dramas and short stories on the department's record player, acting out short plays, and watching filmed dramatic productions are among the highlights in the English classes.

Tape Recordings, Magazines Alter Language Routine

While their classmates examine the work for mistakes, two French 3 students present their translations.

With the addition of two tape recorders during the past year, the Foreign Language Department was able to give French, Spanish, and Latin students a more complete knowledge of the language which they are studying.

In the first two years of foreign language, each student learns the fundamentals and becomes familiar with the history, culture and customs of France, Spain or Rome. Students may supplement this knowledge by taking an additional one or two years of any of the languages.

In the third and fourth years of modern language study, emphasis is placed on strengthening the student's ability to read and speak the language effectively. College textbooks are used in these courses and pupils' conversations in foreign tongues are recorded and examined for mistakes. Magazines printed in French and Spanish offer a frequent change from the course routine, and students find them a rest of their acquired skills.

The third year of Latin mainly deals with the study of Cicero's letters and orations, while the translation of Virgil's Aeneid, offered for the first time in two years, and other works by Roman poets highlights the fourth year Latin curriculum.

As every Latin, French, and Spanish student knows, pronunciation drills are very important in learning to speak a foreign language properly.

Redskin Businessmen Prepare for Future Vocations

All students taking clerical practice know that filing is an important part of the work in any office and must be done carefully, accurately, and speedily. Here, members of one such class try to develop these skills by comparing card files and checking each other's for mistakes.

"Dear Mr. Rogers: In answer to your correspondence . . . Stop. Transcribe." The voice of a shorthand teacher dictating to his class is one of the many business-like sounds echoing through North Side's 220 corridor during the week. Students learn to perform tasks varying from the changing of typewriter ribbons to the developing of an efficient office staff in business classes.

Future secretaries take and transcribe dictation and learn proper forms for business letters. Students in business management and clerical practice file, sign contracts and keep books as they acquire vocational skills. Redskin typists develop speed and accuracy as their progress is determined by frequent tests.

The first two years of business courses cover junior business training and bookkeeping, while Business 5 and 6 deal with consumer economics and law, respectively. The last two semesters concern the organization and management of a business enterprise and business mathematics and accounting. Students may elect to take one or two years of typing, one or two years of shorthand, and one year of clerical practice.

The adoption of more modern business textbooks in all courses and the introduction of new teaching techniques in several classes were notable changes in North's Business Department this year.

Mrs. Maryanne Chapman checks the progress of her Shorthand 1 class, offering helpful advice to those students who are having difficulties.

People Study Other People in Social Science Classes

The girls know the answer; but Miss Bash's question, "Which state was first to ratify the Constitution?" has the boys stumped.

Two members of the House of Representatives vie for recognition from Speaker Ron Goheen during their Civics class' mock session of Congress.

To help students obtain a better understanding of man's relationship to man and government in both the past and the present, and to prepare them for roles as responsible citizens in the future, are the aims of North Side's Social Science Department. For this reason Redskins are offered six social science courses.

In world history, usually taken during the sophomore year, pupils trace the development of civilization from the city-states of ancient Greece to the world of today. This course is followed by United States history, in which students acquire a more detailed knowledge of our country's past.

Government, which deals with the workings of a democracy; and either economics, the study of the production, distribution, and consumption of wealth; or sociology, in which a knowledge of the nature and problems of community life is gained, are taken in the senior year.

Geography and world affairs, the study of foreign lands and their involvement in current affairs, may be elected by North Siders who wish to take an additional social science course. Frequent speeches by natives of foreign countries are one of this subject's highlights.

Mike Wells and Dan Robinson look somewhat bewildered by the coils of ticker tape surrounding them and the clutter of equipment on their laboratory table. Nevertheless, with Jan Trautman lending a helping hand, the boys prepare to measure the relationship of mass to acceleration.

Amateur Scientists Encounter Frogs, Weeds, Fumes

While she heats a mixture of iron filings and sulfur over a Bunsen burner, Cathy Hein awaits a reaction.

Students find themselves studying topics ranging from the dissection of an earthworm to the resolving of force vectors in North Side's science courses. This year the Science Department purchased several anemometers, barometers and thermometers for the physical geography and earth science classes. Because of the increasing emphasis on laboratory work, Redskins dealt more directly with scientific principles and thus put their knowledge to practical use more frequently.

Although pupils may take more than one science course if they desire to, all Redskins are required to have two science credits to be graduated. They may gain these credits in two semesters of biology, botany, zoology, earth science, physical geography, chemistry or physics. A third semester of chemistry, in which students carry out individual research projects, is also offered.

Botany, biology and zoology are detailed studies of plant and animal life, while earth science and physical geography are concerned with the earth, its structure and its climates. Chemistry deals with the composition of both inorganic and organic matter, and physics explains in everyday terms the mathematical relationships of the forces which rule our world.

Botany students Mike Pletcher, Sharon Wagner, and Elizabeth Engeler observe the effect of constant light on the growth rates of seedling plants.

In answer to her question, Mr. Lewis explains to Chemistry 1 student Judy Moore the chemical composition of the substance in her test tube.

While Exploring Nature

As two of their classmates examine specimens of protozoa with microscopes, Susie Shook and Diane Hosler compare notes on the experiment.

'Skins Express Themselves in Speech and Dramatics

Jim Jewel uses a facial expression to convey in pantomime that Susi Gramling has absent-mindedly poured hot coffee on his hand.

Speech and dramatics develop a vital art — that of communication. Speech 1 and 2 emphasize vocal communication, while speech 3 and 4, the study of dramatics, teach co-ordination of the body and the voice for effective communication.

Beginning speech students learn parliamentary procedure, evaluation of speakers, and after controlling wobbly knees and clammy hands, proceed to give speeches to inform, convince, persuade, and impress. Students advance to the use of the microphone and participate in debate and discussion after first acquiring the fundamentals of good speech.

Dramatics includes the study of theater history and types of drama. Facial expressions, original and record pantomimes, dialogues, and short skits are ways in which students learn to express ideas. Classes are requested to watch television programs of special interest or attend Civic Theater productions to observe the effectiveness of production and technical skills. The stagecraft class is concerned with behind the scenes work of dramatics: set building, costuming, and make-up.

Speech I students consider Mike Fletcher's interpretation of a contemporary poem.

Mr. Donald McClead points out the importance of color in Vicki Ervin's design for a silk screen print.

Students Acquire Tastes and Talents in Art Classes

Instructed by Miss Bell, students in crafts class concentrate on smoothing and shaping their ceramic projects.

Basic art courses, introducing many phases of art, are offered at North Side. Students with a serious interest in this subject find specific courses available in crafts, lettering and poster design, life drawing, graphics and painting. The appreciation courses teach Redskins to use art in their daily lives through such things as color coordination and interior decoration.

Adequate facilities and equipment increase the benefits students derive from North Side's Art Department. Two large art rooms and a craft room are equipped with a graphics press, potter's wheel and kiln. This year a motor for polishing jewelry was purchased for use in Art 6, advanced crafts.

Whether a student is interested in art as a vocation or avocation, the Art Department provides opportunity for exploration into this subject. The courses, equipment and teachers all help to direct this exploration towards instilling creativity and awareness into Redskin art students.

Redskins

These open texts and intent expressions will be replaced by lunch trays and laughter when this study hall reverts to a cafeteria.

Preferring the quiet atmosphere of the library, these Redskins tackle their assignments.

Gather in Many Places to Concentrate on Studies

Supervised study halls in the auditorium and cafeteria were established this year to meet North Side's increased enrollment. While most seniors still reported to 316, underclassmen did their studying under less than ideal conditions in the auditorium and cafeteria. Poor lighting and seats without desk tops had to be dealt with in the auditorium.

Many Redskins made use of the school library for reference work, quiet study, and pleasure reading. The public library also became a familiar haunt as deadlines for term papers, short stories and special projects drew near.

In spite of study halls and libraries some homework inevitably ended up being done at home. There the availability of a radio, the telephone, or a snack was both a help and a hinderance to studious Redskins.

Study habits and places differed with the student; but in one way or another, Redskins studied.

Students in one of the many rows of Redskins in 316 study hall appear completely absorbed in their work.

Inconveniences increase restlessness, but students with determination find ways to study in the auditorium.

Practice and more practice such as pictured here has paid off for the Varsity Band. The time spent here and in marching on the football field resulted in a Second Division rating for the group in the Northern Indiana High School Band Competition marching contest.

North Siders Practice To Improve Musical Talents

With Miss Rich as teacher and accompanist, Male Choir practices selections for a concert.

North Side's pride in its Music Department is not unfounded. For the fourth consecutive year the Concert Band won Class A Sweepstakes in the Northern Indiana School Band, Orchestra and Vocal Association. The A Cappella Choir again received numerous requests from local television stations for special programs. In addition, members of the school orchestra occupied almost half of the chairs in Fort Wayne's All-City Orchestra.

Redskins who possess vocal talents may enroll in Girls or Male Choir, Varsity Choir being the next step. From this group, auditions are heard for membership in A Cappella. Within A Cappella are two selected ensembles, Chansonettes and Triple Trio. Chicas Cantates, an all girl choir, is another organized vocal group in North Side's Music Department.

Varsity Band, Concert Band and Orchestra comprise the instrumental section of the Music Department. The bands share musical duties at games, assemblies, and pep sessions, while the orchestra appears at special assemblies and contests. The vocal and instrumental sections combine efforts several times a year to present public concerts.

A Music Appreciation course is available for students who have non-performing interest in music.

'Skins Get Recognition, Benefits from Extra Efforts

Recognition Day is the high point of the academic part of the year. On this day an assembly is held to recognize those students who have achieved outstanding work in their courses during the year. Receiving an award or honorable mention on Recognition Day is the goal which may provide the incentive for Redskins to work and study to the best of their ability.

Ribbons are awarded for excellence in specific courses. Plaques are awarded for such honors as valedictorian and salutatorian; trophies are given for such things as debate, a foreign language, art, and speech.

Another form of recognition at North Side is the D.A.R. Good Citizen award. The recipients of this award as selected by a vote of the Seniors who take into consideration the qualities of dependability, leadership and patriotism.

The honor roll is also a form of recognition. To be on the honor roll one must maintain at least an A minus average in all subjects for a nentire semester. North's Three Year Honor Roll consists of those students who have maintained an A minus average for all three years at North.

Vicki Jornod, winner of the DAR best-citizen award, proudly shows her certificate of merit to runner-up Marty Greene.

As she gazes into a mirror, Joyce Hayhurst wistfully anticipates being the Spirit of North Side at the annual Recognition Day Assembly.

Theorems, Equations Confuse Future Mathematicians

Rulers, compasses, protractors, solid objects, and slide rules are among the instruments used by math students. General math, plane and solid geometry, algebra, and trigonometry were the math courses offered at North Side this year. One unit of math is required for graduation; however, many students find it necessary to develop their math skills further in preparation for future vocations. This semester one of the teachers taught his geometry class using an experimental text and technique from Ball State College.

General math furnishes students with a basic background in arithmetic. Solving equations with unknown values is the main objective of algebra. Geometry acquaints students with the mathematical relationship of solids, surfaces, lines, and angles. Trigonometry is the branch of mathematics that deals with the relationships between the sides and angles of triangles. Such are the courses offered to meet the increasing demand for mathematical skills in today's world.

Steve Doan attempts to convince a doubting Sharon Blough that the slide rule can be of benefit in solving math problems.

Exhibiting the many figures with which Geometry 3 students must be familiar, Mr. Clark explains the structure of one of these figures to math students Dick Stont and Christine Tigges.

Carol Bruick points out the oil line on the dip stick to Barb Griffiths, Mr. Crousore, and Steve Newman in the driver education class.

Pupils Acquire Better Habits from Books and Films

Driver's training, health, and family living are courses offered at North Side to aid the students in the everyday aspects of adult life.

During the semester of training and practice, most students develop the confidence and skill required of good drivers. Last fall two new teachers joined North Side's Driving Department along with a new addition of a 1963 Ford Galaxie.

One year of health is required to be graduated from North. Students taking health learn basic facts about the human body and how to keep it functioning properly.

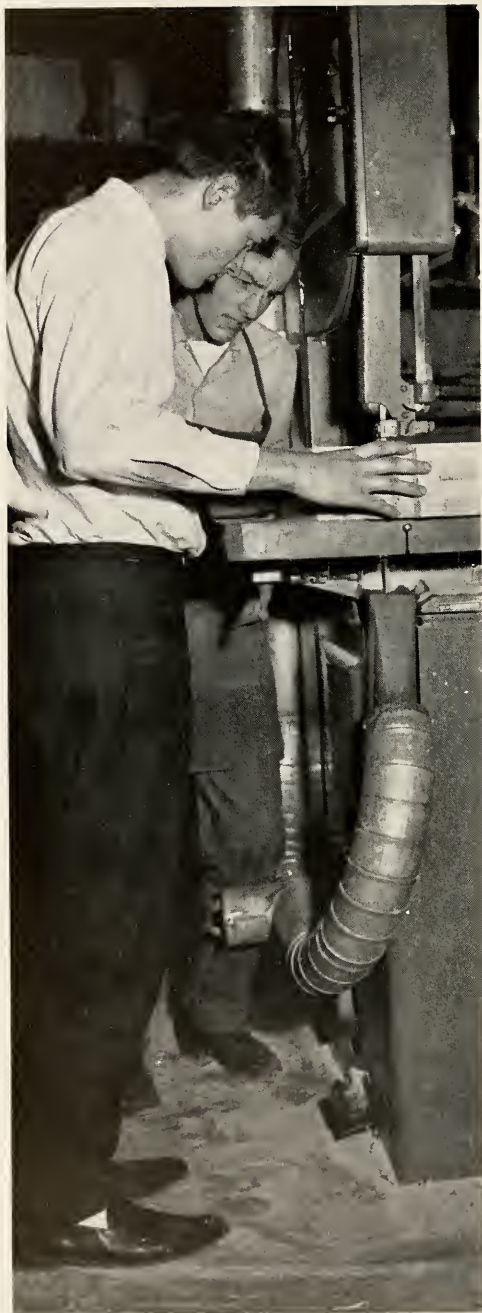

Family living classes attempt to prepare students for the problems encountered during adult life. Students also gain a better understanding of how to acquire a more rewarding relationship within the family from their family living classes.

Four health students, exploring the insides of the school's model of the human body, seem intrigued at the complexity of the structure.

Students in a family living class add variety to their daily class schedule by decorating the bulletin board.

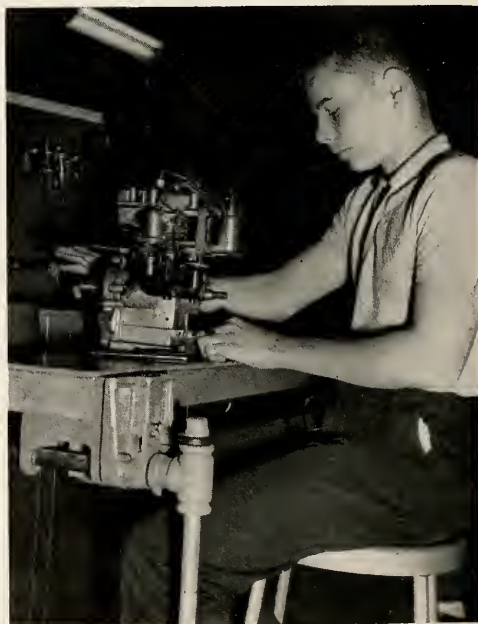

Industrial art work provides a means for pupils to work with tools, materials and different machines. North Side offers courses in wood, metal and drawing, where students design anything from furniture to office buildings. In wood classes boys choose projects on which they will work the entire semester. The metal students are assigned a semester project which will acquaint them with the different types of machines. In drawing classes students learn about mechanical drawing. A great need is developing for these skills.

Technical information is being stressed in all three courses to give students a good background for many of the armed forces courses.

The aim of the Industrial Art Department is not only to help the student understand the industrial life going on in his community, state, and country, but also to give him a general background that will help him find his vocation and will help him be more successful in any job in this general classification.

Using Forges and Skillets,

Kenny Powers gains skill and knowledge while working an intricate machine in his industrial arts class.

Robert Rhodes looks on as John King carefully shapes a circular piece of wood by making use of a bon saw.

In September a new part was added to the Home Economics Department including a washer, dryer, ironer, refrigerator and stove. These additional appliances aid in teaching home economics students how to use modern household equipment. Also new this year was a slide and film strip and a projector movie screen.

The home economics course emphasizes such skills as cooking, sewing, wise purchasing habits, caring for children, getting along with people and the budgeting of time and money. In food classes students acquire a practical knowledge of cookery, including how to make nourishing as well as pleasant tasting meals. After the preparation of a meal, the students set their table as they would in their homes and sample the dishes they have prepared.

Students in sewing classes not only learn about materials, but also about the workings and maintenance of the electric sewing machine. Each girl may choose her own project or projects on which to work during the entire semester.

Carol Tomlinson and Vicki Street work diligently to prepare an attractive and nourishing breakfast in a foods class.

Students Complete Projects in Vocational Courses

Donna Parent and Sandy Antrim, finding that there is much satisfaction in making one's own clothes, enjoy creating a skirt or some other article of clothing from a pattern and a piece of material during their sewing class.

"Sorry honey, I'll be late again tonight. There's another department meeting. One of these days we'll figure out how to pare down the world's ideas so that even I can understand them; then maybe I'll be able to get them across to my teen-age students. One of the kids is coming in after the meeting for help. I'm afraid he has more than a problem of intelligence. Wish I knew when to stop being the distant school-master and start being a stand-in parent . . . No, not tonight. The club meets the fourth Wednesday.

Did you hear about the faculty bowling team making a city record the other night? I wish I could arrange my time that well. It seems that our children never see me when I'm not behind a stack of papers. It's Bill's turn to take tickets at the game Friday. Maybe the whole family can go to a show.

I wonder if I can put more pressure on period two. They're all Einsteins but do more goofing around than studying. I mustn't be too picky, though; they take criticism as if it were the end of the world. If only they understood what I'm trying to accomplish."—A Teacher

Closing Ten Years of Leadership, Service to North,

Mr. Robertson's teaching experience and basic educational training have made him the qualified principal that is needed for a large school.

With forty-four years of dedicated service to the young people of Indiana, Principal O. Dale Robertson retired at the end of the 1963 school year.

Starting his teaching career in a one-room country school, he eventually taught at Nebraska school, where he was principal for three years. Following this, he was principal of the present Franklin Junior High for seventeen years; after serving there he was transferred to North, where he has been principal for ten years.

Besides keeping up to date on school activities, Mr. Robertson finds time to attend the social functions at school as well as pursuing his many outside activities. He attends the Wayne Street Methodist Church, where he taught adult Sunday School for several years. When not chasing golf balls, Mr. Robertson enjoys reading during his leisure time.

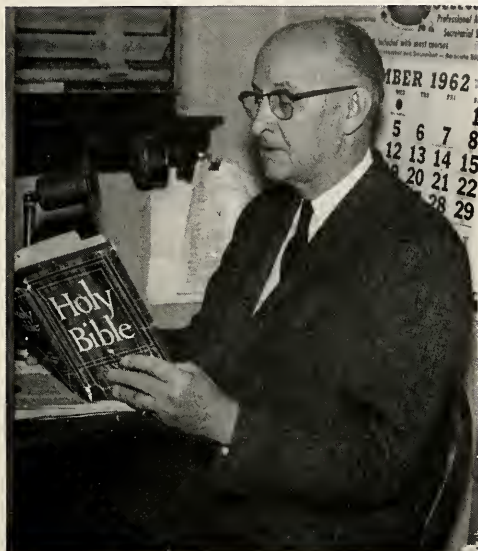

Carrying the load of principal entails a great deal of responsibility. North Side Redskins feel that Mr. Robertson has met and surpassed his responsibilities.

With the help of Mrs. Lillian Graham, school secretary, Mr. Robertson is able to keep up with his paper work.

O. Dale Robertson Makes Plans for His Retirement

The announcements every Monday morning are opened with a Bible reading, a tradition established by Mr. Robertson.

Like all North Siders, Mr. O. Dale Robertson has to take time to study school problems and carry on correspondence.

Mr. Robertson also participates in many committee meetings. Here, the Student Council president, Greg Meister, explains the newly written Student Council code for dress with Mr. Robertson; Mrs. Gordon Adams, P.T.A. president; Mr. John Walter, Miss Judy Wartzok; and Dr. Bill Anthis, Dean of Boys.

P.T.A. Programs Help Parents to Understand Teens

The first P.T.A. project of the year was launched in Room 310 in the form of the annual P.T.A. membership drive. Promoting the campaign through homerooms, the P.T.A. mothers were kept busy with sorting, distributing, and recollecting the membership envelopes.

The officers of the 1962-63 P.T.A. are from right to left: Mrs. Gordon Adams, president; Mrs. Howard Jornod, first vice-president; Mrs. Harold Radatz, secretary; and Mrs. Robert Cowan, treasurer.

Ministers, educational experts, mothers, and even fathers presented speeches, panels and skits on such topics as "Is Disrespect Inevitable?" and "Do You Trust Your Teenager?" to provide for this year's P.T.A. programs. Following the theme, "More Power To Parents," many informing programs were planned for the monthly meetings and the Wednesday morning study groups.

An example of a regular meeting could be cited when Judge W. O. Huges spoke, helping parents and teachers alike gain an insight to the problems of delinquency.

P.T.A. parents also attended classes this year. On Back-To-School Night, mothers and fathers could be seen searching for their child's classrooms like lost sophomores in order to become better acquainted with the faculty and the North Side curriculum.

Attempting to guide and understand today's teenager has been the goal of the North Side P.T.A., and they have made steps toward achieving this goal through their programs.

Faculty Members Pursue Many Hobbies for Relaxing

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" could be the motto of North Side's faculty. The eighty-seven Red-skin teachers do not restrict all of their talents to instructing, but pursue outside hobbies as well. Participating in fishing, swimming, and ice skating, the majority of North's faculty enjoys outdoor sports. The faculty also has a bowling league which meets every Tuesday evening.

Photography lures the faculty camera bugs, and North's teachers can also boast ham radio operators and radio and TV announcing enthusiasts.

North Side's faculty realizes that an individual develops his abilities not only in work but in play as well. Their participation in outside activities reflects upon this attitude; and their personalities in and out of school prove that if a teacher is enthusiastic about his work, his classes will be more enjoyable.

Gliding gracefully in a figure eight, Mrs. Carol Seaman flashes a smile for her fans.

Steak anyone? Rare or well done? When not busy teaching, Mr. Wayne F. Brown spends some of his spare time barbecuing.

in Spare Time

Doing homework is not a novel experience for teacher By Hey.

According to Mr. Ronald Lewton, Mr. Leslie Reeves, and Mr. Robert Traster, the motto they would like North Side to follow is the famous saying, "Hear no evil. See no evil. Say no evil."

A vacant classroom is a rarity at North. If more of them were emptier, passing classes would take a fraction of the time that it does now. Everyone could come to school at the respectable hour of eight. Lunch could be served between eleven and one, and fewer people would gulp their meals in six minutes. Yet without the 2300 folks who cram the cafeteria and corridors and classrooms, a major part of education would be missing.

Perhaps a person knows a fraction of his fellow students at sight, 400 at most; 200 of these he speaks to in the hall, or works with in club meetings, or argues with in the classroom, or joins in the cafeteria for lunch. Of these, a dozen he calls friends; he can talk to one or two. From these acquaintances, even from the 1,600 strangers he gains the ability to keep a firm grip on his temper in a squeezing and shoving crowd, to laugh at a joke on himself, and to draw the best from himself and others in his daily comings and goings throughout his trial run with adult life in high school. The full classroom can be a symbol to the student of a future rich with acquaintances of the past.

Well-qualified Officers, Advisors Lead Class of '63

Senior advisers for this year were, in the bottom row: Mr. Stanley Lee, Mr. Paul Lemke, Miss Elizabeth Little, Mrs. Alice Nusbaum, Miss Marie Miller, Miss Mabel Greenwalt, Mr. Donald McCleod, Mr. John Mallott. In the top row are: Mr. Beryl Lewis, Mr. John Becker, Mr.

Ronald Lewton, Mr. Waveland Snider, Mr. James Lewinski, Mr. Fred Humphrey, Mr. Robert Edwards, Mr. Ivan Fry, Mr. Charles Feller, and Mr. Bill Williams are not pictured.

Leading the senior class were, in the first row, Lou Bojrab, Marty Greene, and Rick McLean. Standing in the second row are George Bryce, Steve Esterline, and Steve Pence.

Following a hectic week of poster parties, speeches and colorful campaign tags, the members of the Class of 1963 elected their class officers for the final time. Steve Esterline was chosen president; George Bryce, vice-president; Marty Greene, secretary-treasurer, and Steve Pence, chairman of the social council. These officers, along with the social council and the class advisers, were responsible for the organization and planning of the traditional senior activities.

The prom, which took place early in June, climaxed a busy year of job and college-hunting, parties, and long hours of hard studying. The announcement of the valedictorian, salutatorian, and three-year Honor Roll at the Honor Banquet culminated the scholastic efforts of the class.

During the hurry and confusion of the closing weeks, school work was forgotten almost entirely. Caps and gowns were delivered, announcements were sent to friends and relatives, and gifts were bought for the homeroom teachers. Academic achievements held the spotlight for one last time as worthy seniors were honored at the Recognition Day Assembly. At commencement the Class of 1963 accepted their hard-won diplomas and bade farewell to North Side.

Seniors Crowd Many Activities into Busy Schedules

Under the chairmanship of social council member Lou Bojrab, the program committee plans one part of the Senior Banquet.

Waiting to welcome the New Year, Ann Walley and Jerry Bryce keep cool by eating ice at Greg Meister's New Year's Eve party.

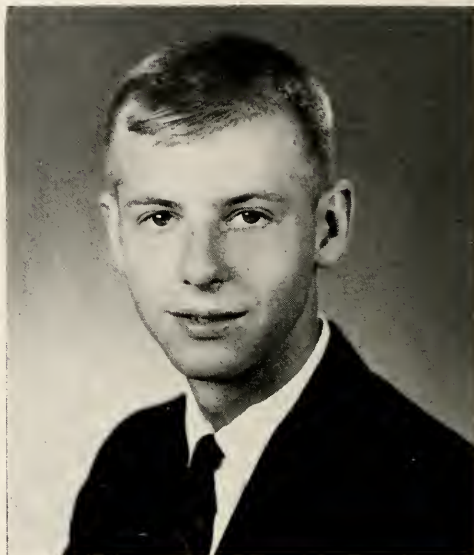

While amused guests watch, Joyce Hayhurst gleefully opens a humorous gift at a surprise birthday party given for her by friends.

Carol Johnson and Steve Smith Lead Honors List

Carol Anne Johnson

Steven James Smith

Because of her varied interests, Valedictorian Carol Johnson has participated in many ways in the activities of North Side. Her academic achievements speak for themselves — she is a National Merit semi-finalist; her skill as a twirler earned her the position of head majorette; her talents in art led to membership and leadership in Daffi Dabblers. Outside of school she is active in her church youth group, the Walther League. Planning to attend either Michigan State or Indiana University, Carol will study science and mathematics, although her career plans have not been completed.

Salutatorian Steve Smith, who is interested in mathematics, plans a career as an actuary. One of the National Merit semi-finalists and a McAndless scholar, he will enroll in the honors program at the University of Michigan to study for a degree in actuarial science. Practical experience in that field will be supplied through his summer job at Lincoln Life. His school activities have ranged from Student Council to club to service work to being a delegate to Boys' State. Although he is a member of the Beginners' Duplicate Bridge Club, he also finds time for water sports and tennis outside of school.

Banjo (Dick Fisher) jumps up to shut glamorous Lorraine Sheldon (Vicki Jornod) into a mummy cast as Sheridan Whiteside (Dave Kinney) watches.

‘Sheridan’ Kinne, Cast Produce Comedy; Class of ’63

Miss Harriet Stanley (Joan Houser) surprises Sheridan Whiteside by sneaking downstairs and giving him old pictures of herself.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Stanley (Stan Needham and Jane Woodings) provided the setting for the side-splitting comedy, "The Man Who Came to Dinner." When the Stanley's famous dinner guest, Sheridan Whiteside (Dave Kinney), slipped on the icy porch and broke his hip, the fun began. Phone calls to and from Europe, an army of cockroaches presented by the intellectual Professor Metz (Dave Greene), and a visiting movie star (Vicki Jornod), provided only a part of the antics.

The bizarre became the expected during Whiteside's two-week stay in the Stanley household. Their daughter (Susie Wuthrich) ran away to get married, and (Jim Clausen) the Stanley's son left to board a tramp steamer. The appearance of Banjo (Dick Fisher), a wild and "wolfy" friend of the Sheridans, proved to be too much for the Sheridan's nurse, Miss Preen, (Marty Greene) who decided to quit the nursing profession to work in a munitions factory. Even good-natured Dr. Bradley (Frank Pipino) lost his patience in his vain attempt to get his book about the medical profession published. Only Maggie Cutler (Connie Hanes), Mr. Whiteside's private secretary seemed to understand the tyrant; but she, too, gave up when he tried to kill her romance with Bert Jefferson (Rich Frank). The day of Whiteside's departure was a joyous occasion for all. As he left and the curtain fell, a crash was heard. Sheridan had broken his other hip!

Following the Senior Banquet, some senior girls enjoy themselves at a slumber party given by one of their classmates.

Dines at Traditional Banquet

Four hundred eighty-one seniors filled the Scottish Rite ballroom as the members of the Class of '63 presented "As Time Goes By," their edition of the traditional senior banquet. Senior adviser Mr. Ivan Fry gave the invocation. After the dinner, master of ceremonies and class president Steve Esterline introduced the guests seated at the head table and the student speakers who, in turn, reminisced their class's four years at North Side. Claralyn Shearer, speaking of the freshman year, recalled many adventures of the lowly "frosh." On the subject of the sophomore year, Steve Smith mentioned that the biggest accomplishment of the class, besides becoming orientated in its new school, was getting both the boys and the girls together in the cafeteria for the sophomore party. Vickie Jornod then related the memories of the prom and the great feeling it was to be an upperclassman. Finally, George Bryce summed up the class's achievements and expressed his feelings toward its last year.

After the faculty response by Miss Elizabeth Lirtle, the senior members of Chansonettes and Triple Trio sang the song, "As Time Goes By." Dr. John W. Meister, the principal speaker, illustrated the banquet's theme by applying our personal lives to problems we will face in the future. After the benediction by Bruce Arnold, the seniors and their dates were entertained at a record hop sponsored by the parents.

Class of '64 Proves Its Abilities As Upperclassmen

Junior class officers are, standing, Steve Beights, president; and seated, Mike Buckner, vice-president; Ann Johnston, secretary-treasurer; James Hoover, social chairman.

The lofty feeling of being looked upon as upperclassmen was a distinction that many members of the Class of 1964 were able to enjoy, beginning with the first major event of the year, which was the election of class officers. Since there were more than three nominations for some offices, a primary took place.

The class chose Steve Beights to serve as president, while Mike Buckner was to be vice-president; Ann Johnston, secretary-treasurer; and Jim Hoover, chairman of the social council.

Through the efforts of the class officers; the class advisors, Mr. Robert Pugh, and Miss Ruth Eudaly; and with the co-operation of the social council consisting of John Kent, Dave Esterline, Robert Shoaff, and Ben Peternell, the juniors sponsored the traditional prom in the Scottish Rite Ballroom on April 20. The affair, which was highlighted by an after-prom party, provided many juniors with a happy remembrance as they brought their second year under the Dome to its conclusion midst dreams and expectations of their senior year and their graduation as Redskins.

900 Eager Sophomores Become Full-Fledged 'Skins

Sophomore class officers are Steve Shearer, chairman of the social council; Pam Wagner, secretary-treasurer; Bill Leming, vice-president; and Don Rice, president.

Entering the Dome 900 strong, the sophomore class swelled North Side enrollment to the largest in the city. After a hectic two weeks of posters, speeches, and campaign buttons, Don Rice, Bill Leming, Pam Wagner, and Steve Shearer were proclaimed victors in the class elections as president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, and social chairman respectively.

Talks by Mrs. Victoria Young, Mr. Robert Sinks, and Mr. William Quick at guidance sessions informed them of North's rules. Student speeches gave them valuable information about extra-curricular activities. An inspiring message by Mr. Quaker Oats caused the sophs to think seriously about what it means to be an American. Credit for making the sophomore programs a success can be awarded to Miss Jane Felger and Miss Janice Michiels, class advisers. The class party on May 3 climaxed the sophomore year and proved that the class of 1965 has quality as well as quantity.

"... This meeting will please come to order ... The treasurer is absent, is there any new business? ... Is there a second for that motion? ... All those in favor signify by saying 'aye.' Opposed, a like sign ... I now declare this meeting officially adjourned."

These excerpts from parliamentary procedures are familiar to North Siders who belong to extracurricular activities. Each weekday, scenes very similar to this one can be seen in Room 310 as one of the thirty odd clubs meets. It looks easy, almost nonchalant; but there is a tremendous amount of work involved in getting a club meeting ready. There are cabinet meetings to decide on agenda and to vote on issues for the club. Advisers must be notified; a speaker or a program must be arranged and prepared. But besides the routine of scheduled meetings, the clubs at North Side have a greater purpose than just meeting. Some clubs do good works like giving parties for people at the old folks home or wrapping gifts for the residents in the State School. Some clubs meet for the purpose of understanding more about a specific field of study. Some meet so that they can help the school by entertaining at a basketball game or by helping in the office and study hall. To accomplish these aims, each officer and member must do his job carefully and well so that the club will run smoothly from the time it is first called to order in September until it is finally adjourned in June.

Redskins Practice Pen Power by Serving Northerner

The editor-in-chief position was shared by three people this past year; Frank Pipino, Joyce Hayhurst, and Carol Lash. Frank held the position for the first three months of school; Joyce, for the second three months; and Carol, for the closing three months. While one of them held the office, the remaining two composed an Editorial Board. The Board advised and helped the editor in the actual editing of the paper. In other words, while one of them held the editorship, the remaining two were his or her assistants.

The above idea became a fact when Miss Norma Thiele, publications' advisor, realized that there were three people worthy of the editorship. She appointed them accordingly. This had never been done before at North Side.

Other top position holders on the Northerner staff were: Copy Editors, Pat Tweedy and Jim Jewel; News Editor, Mary Sayles; Feature Editor, Dee Coughlin; Sports Editor, Randy Harter; Circulation Manager, Carol Dougherty; Business Manager, Tom Bruck; Advertising Manager, Karen Hill; Co-exchange Managers, Sue Householder, Carolyn Rousseau, and Marilyn Schmidt; and Point Recorder, Sue Scheele.

Correcting and reading proof galleys are Frank Pipino, assisted by Joyce Hayhurst and Carol Lash, all being editorial board members.

Adding their assistance to Pat Tweedy's dummy page are Sue Lotter, Dee Coughlin, and Randy Harter.

In cutting the stories from the paper Sue Scheele is helping Lynn Shubert in her task of recording each person's points earned by writing stories for the Northerner.

Northerner photographers Jerry Nissenbaum, Tom Cross, and Dave Laws are busily searching for a negative in the file.

As Mary Anglin listens to Steve Smith, Kay Nemyer types out copy.

As unforgettable and memorable as a yearbook is for some or becomes to others as time goes by, it must not and can not be left unsaid that many toiling hours and much hard work goes into the making and preparation of this Legend. The final and finished efforts of the following members of this year's staff are here presented to the reader, in hopes they will fill many leisure moments reminiscent of the past 1962-63 North Side school year.

This staff was headed by the editor-in-chief, Jim Nolan, who had as a managing editor, Susie Householder and as an assistant editor, Betty Lindegren. Editing the academic section was Steve Smith, with Mary Anglin and Clarayln Shearer as assistants. Assistants Bonnie Rudensky, Kay Nemyer, and Cami Gabriele helped editor Cathy Hein produce the activities section. With the assistance of Bob Tegtmeyer, Steve Pence edited the sports section. Ginny Olscan assisted editor Ann Walley in composing the copy section. Under the direction of Judy Moore, with the assistance of Mary Sayles, the index section was produced. Editor Reba Wells with her assistant, Lindy Moellering, edited the junior section, while editor Connie Boldt along with Linda Busian composed the sophomore section. Carole laws edited the senior section and Kathy Haughey assisted her. Vicki Jornod and Carolyn Doughty composed the faculty staff, Ed Haught, Liz Bedree, and John Kent made up the business staff.

Recognition in 1500 Club appeases all the hectic, nail-biting, hair-tearing moments endured by Northerner staffmen. Upon accumulating for published stories the long awaited 1,500 points, news-hounds attain membership in this national honorary society. The bronze pin received for this accomplishment serves as an incentive for greater journalistic feats: 3,000 points merits a silver pin and 5,000 points, a gold pin. To qualify for a journalism letter a journalist must have 7,500 points and 10,000 points for a gold jeweled pin.

The journalistic talent of the '63 class was made evident at the January Publications Banquet. When the time arrived to award the Quill and Scroll pins, Miss Norma Thiele proceeded to announce — not the usual number of four to six names, — but a list of thirteen students who had been selected for membership in this honorary organization. The journalistic ability of these Northerner or Legend staffmen in the upper third of the senior class was judged valuable by the school advisor and finally by the club's national secretary.

Color Rains as Daffi Dabblers Brighten Corridors

From paint pots, glue pots, paint-smeared palettes, and the talent of Daffi Dabblers, the art club, come the products sold, exhibited, and made by them. The unmistakable fact that Christmas was here was evidenced not only by Santa and snow, but also by the greens erected by Daffi Dabblers' interior decorators. After the hard work involved in putting up Christmas decorations, they relaxed by enjoying a potluck supper. The children who were patients in Parkview Hospital during the month of December watched as their windows were transformed into pictures of Santas, Christmas trees, and gay clowns. Jingling down the halls were the possessors of Christmas corsages made and sold by members of the art club.

While gazing at El Grecos, Goyas, Reniors, and Picassos, Daffi Dabblers enriched their art educations by a trip to a big city art museum. In addition to art museums, the travelers also attended performances at the theater, enjoying road company productions of Broadway plays. The art theme dominated the activities of the club when it was time for the Daffi Dabblers' dance. Abstract paintings, used as posters, invited students to attend the dance. Bright colors livened up the halls when the club sponsored its annual art sale.

Jane Woodings and Jeff Smith are busily occupied making Christmas bells for the artists in Daffi Dabblers to sell.

Initiates Schoolwide Election of Officers

"I move the previous question" was a familiar statement to the elected representatives from each homeroom and the presidents of each club and class who composed the membership of the Student Council. This motion to stop debate was necessitated by the great amount of work which faced the Council each first Thursday of the month.

This year's Student Council officers were unique in the fact that the four main officers were elected by the entire student body. The schoolwide election was initiated by last year's council in order to bring the council closer to the students and therefore promote greater co-operation.

The meetings of the Student Council were occupied with not only the planning of the annual projects of supporting two war orphans, sponsoring a dance, and assisting the Christmas Bureau, but also with initiating several projects. The Council's thirty-year-old constitution was revised and ratified after numerous committee meetings, specially called meetings and heated debates. Through the co-operation of the faculty, the P.T.A., and the student body, North Side's theme for this year, Neatness in Dress, was accented by the writing and adopting of a code of dress.

The 1st duty of this year's student council was to meet with the future council members after the nomination and election of the future Council officers.

Unravelling three-page sentences was one of the more exasperating yet humorous aspects of Helicon's study of "The Works of William Faulkner." Analyzing short stories and novels of the author for the first semester discussion, the club was lectured by Mr. J. R. Lewinski.

The podluck, an annual get-together for the senior members and junior and senior initiates, this year entertained the unwelcomed visitor—rain. As ruler of the roost, he demanded that forty-nine persons crowd into Mary Beams' 15'x22' rec room, where the temptations to elbow-poke and knee-knock were kept within reasonable limits.

Other traditions do not limit themselves solely to literary pursuits. For the Christmas party at the Allen County Home, the pillow-stuffed Santa; his helpers in short skirts, long tights, and stocking caps; servers in gaily-colored aprons; the play cast; and remaining Heliconers greeted and charred with the residents.

As co-worker in the multi-club sponsored paper-back book sale, Helicon initiated a means of providing a wider selection of reading material to the student body.

The newly emerging African Nations was the theme of the Globe Trotter program year. A young student from Ghana discussed the politics and customs of his country and then gave Globe Trotters his impressions of the United States. Members engaged in philanthropic activities by gathering clothing and medicine for orphans in Saigon, the capitol of South Viet Nam. Japanese teenagers corresponded with several members so that they might learn more about the United States and promote peace among different peoples. The largest project of the year was the sponsorship of the junior trip to Washington and Williamsburg.

Roman Lore Examined by Junior Classical League

The Junior Classical League is a national organization composed of local classical clubs in junior and senior high schools throughout the United States. The purpose of the North Side club, with a membership of 110 students, is to encourage interest in the study of Latin and to study the history of the Romans.

During the meetings which take place the eighth period on the last Tuesday of each month, the members revised the Constitution to include Associate Members in the meetings. These are students who can only attend some of the meetings because of conflicting schedules. Roman education and methods of telling time used in the ancient nation were a few of the topics discussed during these meetings. Adding to the knowledge of the students along the lines of the Romans were Miss Judith Bowen, advisor, and eight students who attended the national convention in Montana this past summer.

M.L.C. Expands Knowledge of French and Spanish

Betty and Carol Bishop exhibit their souvenirs of British Honduras to the members of Modern Language Club.

After one semester of taking either French or Spanish, students have the opportunity to join the Modern Language Club. The members, who meet to expand their knowledge of French and Spanish and the countries that use these languages by viewing movies or listening to tape recordings and speakers, also engaged in social activities and service projects dealing with modern languages.

At the annual Christmas party with the Junior Classical League, language students demonstrated their musical skill by singing carols in French, Spanish, and Latin. A pinata, or Spanish Christmas ornament filled with candy and small gifts, was broken during the party, causing a mad scramble for the goodies. Soft lights, pink and red decorations, and a huge heart-shaped mural dominated Cupid's Caper, the Modern Language Club dance. By buying Spanish and French dictionaries and placing them in the language rooms and library, the club did service for the school and made language study easier for the student. To the tune of the "La Marseillaise," the French national anthem, Modern Language Club presented a French flag for the trophy case as the last official act of the year.

Who would climb a ten-foot high rolling elevator platform just to hang drapes? Seven Hi-Y'ers did one school-night in answer to a short notice request from the Coliseum to prepare for the Christ Child's Festival. The desire of these Christian boys to give service- perfect responsibility, and inspire leadership, revealed itself through Hi-Y programming of exemplary activities: the Hi-Y'ers repainted numbers on studyhall desks, cared for a family from the Christmas Bureau, raised and donated funds for YMCA sponsored organizations, and in their meetings discussed such topics as "The Changing Outlook on Christmas" and methods for better teen-parent relationship.

This past year the Girls' Athletic Association, offered enthused girls various opportunities for physical development from tumbling to archery to modern dance classes. Those interested could go to the girls' gym during 5L, 6L, or 7L of any school day, or they could attend the practices held after school the eighth period of any Tuesday, Thursday, or Friday. All attended the monthly business meetings every second Friday. The G.A.A. held a pot-luck following the girls versus women teachers volleyball game.

N.F.L. Members Travel Far To Attend Speech Meets

To be a member of the National Forensic League, or not to be a member of the club was a perplexing problem which many speech students faced this year. With all the complexities of the new schedule many, who had formerly taken part in the club's activities, found that they couldn't do so this year. Mr. Lee, the adviser commented, "We're still looking for a solution to the problem and hope to have a more active season next year. We are using this season as a learning experience and are endeavoring to identify all aspects of the problem."

The club members who did meet this year during the fifth period lunch period every first and third Monday, did so for the purpose of public speaking. They witnessed oratorics and declamations by more experienced speakers and developed their own speaking talents.

The 312 bulletin board, where all the speech meets are listed, was the nucleus of most of the club's activities. Here one could sign up for any speech meet in which North Side participated. There were several meetings scheduled for beginners and then several for the more experienced speakers. One of the beginner's meets was the annual meeting at Howe Military Academy.

Specialized Teaching Fields Discussed in F.T.A.

New members of F.T.A. take their place in a candlelight initiation.

"To learn about the opportunities in teaching, to cultivate the qualities essential in a good teacher, and to foster the development of student leadership" are the purposes of the Norgro Future Teachers of America Club, better known at North as simply F.T.A. Specifically, the F.T.A. members chose to learn more about the various specialized teaching fields this year. The group was rewarded for their tramp through the snow to the State School by a talk given by the head of the training school on teaching the mentally retarded child. Other programs concerned teaching the emotionally disturbed child, the physically handicapped child, and the exceptional child.

Assisting teachers with their paper grading and other tasks was one of the projects initiated by this year's group. The teachers who requested student help were assigned an F.T.A. member whose free periods coincide with theirs. At opportune times during the year, the group took time to honor North's teachers and to publicize the values of an education.

In addition to the programs concerning specialized teaching, the group sponsored their traditional meetings. These included a mother's tea, a Christmas party, and a spring picnic.

Tri-M's, Nat'l Thespians Excel in Performance

Whether it be the backstage operator of curtains, lights, and sound effects, the costume seamstress, or the song and dance man who performs on the stage, National Thespians recognizes all phases of its participants' work. Serving a two-fold purpose, the club honors those who have done outstanding work in the field of dramatics and represents the goal-sight for future Senior Play and Varsity Varieties performers.

To be elected a member of Modern Music Masters is an honor sought by North's instrumentalists. New members are selected bi-annually by a membership vote. This year new and old members combined to do all the backstage production work for the all school musical, which they initiated as one of their projects. Another of their projects is the annual co-sponsoring of Varsity Varieties. The proceeds were used to buy music stands.

North Side was the beneficiary of the projects sponsored by the fourth and fifth period Key Clubs. The two organizations, sponsored by a local Kiwanis Club, perform good deeds both for the benefit of the school and the character of the boys involved. The largest undertaking of the year was the partial construction of four tennis courts on school property. Business concerns on the north side of town were asked to contribute money for the project. Raising the $5,000 necessary for the construction of the courts was the biggest problem. The student body contributed its share by patronizing two dances sponsored by the Key Clubs before the regional basketball tourney and after the sectional track meet. The sponsoring Kiwanis Club helped the boys meet their goal by contributing money for the court fund. Most of the actual construction will be done by a contractor, but the boys of the two clubs will pitch in by painting, putting up fences and spreading gravel.

Besides collecting money for the tennis courts, the Key Clubs worked for the Christmas Bureau by packing, loading, and delivering boxes and by canvassing the north side for canned goods and clothing for the Bureau. Christmas time also saw the boys wrapping gifts for the residents of the State School. Nor only do the Key Clubs have projects, but they also listen to speakers talk on such topics as driver safety and vocations.

Instituted in 1940, the Junior Red Cross was formed for the purpose of assisting civic organizations and local causes. The North Side Junior Red Cross under the direction of Mrs. Alice Nusbaum helped at the Blood Bank by labeling bottles and at the State School by wrapping Christmas presents. The club decorated the halls and rooms of the Veterans' Hospital during the holidays and aided in feeding the patients.

On the school scene the Junior Red Cross adopted a patient at the Allen County Home. Members would voluntarily go and visit him. On his birthday the club presented him with a cake and brightened his Christmas by giving him several presents.

Once a year the club sponsors what is called a "game night" at the Allen County Home. The Junior Red Cross members go to the home and literally take over the place. Members entertain the patients, and everyone was welcome to join in the fun with all the refreshments being served by the club members.

Resa McIntyre, Suzanne Lee, and Carol Hoar play Santa as they prepare a Christmas surprise for the hospital patients they regularly visit.

Orbiting North Side is a group of physics and chemistry students who make up the membership of Phy-Chem. The club's purpose is to explore the job opportunities available in the physical science field and to learn additional information about physics and chemistry by having demonstrations of experiments put before the club.

The activities of the club, which range from a picnic and an after game dance to experiments dealing with the science of extreme cold, demonstrate how scientifically minded the members are. The way in which physics and chemistry are taught in Germany was the topic discussed by a foreign student from Indiana Tech.

Math Club Buys Two Electronic Brains for Fun, Study

Have you ever been trapped in a hexaflexagon or programmed your Saturday night date on an electronic computer? The members of Mu Alpha Theta, alias Math club, have. Last year the club bought a digital computer named Minivac. Minivac being a very clever brain, can count up to 63 or solve simple math problems. Because the brain wasn't enough, the club purchased a second machine named Brainiac. Brainiac is more stupid than her cousin; she can only play simple games like tic-tac-toe and do simple addition and subtraction problems.

Besides experimenting with electronic brains, the club also studied non-Euclidian geometry, which is the study of non-planed surfaces. Mathematical games and puzzles also occupied some of the time of the mathematicians. The purpose of all this interest in numbers is to learn some of the aspects of the great field of math.

"Now if we cross this wire here, and that wire over there maybe" says Linda Kaiser to a confused Craig Reynolds.

Ripplettes Pose as Squaws, Sailors at Pep Session

South Side sailors, Mary Beams and Barb Griffiths, are about to fall victim to the mighty Redskin squaws in the Ripplette pep session skit.

"Ripplettes is an organization whose membership is comprised of very select and talented girls in the field of swimming," terms Miss Cichels, the advisor. Every two years these girls perform a water-show for the public. As this is the off-year for the show, the girls did not practice routines with music on the nights that they met; but instead, each girl practiced and perfected her individual stunts and strokes.

Not having to meet the membership requirements the water-show demands, only nine new members were chosen to fill the vacancies left by the fourteen graduating seniors. Distinguishing these new members were the blue and white signs each of them was required to wear for about three weeks during the school time. The signs read, "I am a new Ripplette member."

The first part of the year was taken up with the election of the new officers and members, since the Ripplette members last year decided to wait for their new advisor, Miss Michels to come and help them in the selection. Because of this, the banquet and family night, which are usually held in December of the school year, were held in February.

Boosters Sell Pop, Candy, Popcorn at Home Games

Diligently performing one of their most important duties as Booster Club members, Mary Boissenet and Juanita Altekruze sell coke at halftime.

"Get your popcorn, peanuts, and candy right here," might well be the theme of the Booster Club, for selling these concessions, plus others, is one of the duties of this organization. To make and to sell Redskin cushions, sectional shakers, pins, "school spirit" badges and stickers for automobiles also fall as responsibilities upon this club. This year a sheet containing a numerical listing of the teachers and their respective homerooms was made and distributed by the club members.

Sharing the sponsorship of "Jersey Jive," a dance put on by both the club and the cheerleaders, the Boosters made their largest profit of the year. This money was used to send cheerleaders to "away" games and to buy senior cheerleading sweaters. The money was also used to purchase the materials needed for the making of the shakers, pins, badges and cushions. Finally, the remaining money was used to help celebrate the Christmas season with a rollicking party at Mr. Whittern's house for all the members and their dates.

The annual picnic in June, which was attended by Mr. Whittern, the Boosters' adviser, and all the members, brought another year to the close.

By Daily Practicing, Musicians Combine Talents To

For the fourth straight year the Marching Redskins captured both the sweepstakes trophy and a first division rating in the NISBOVA marching contest which was held on Northrup Field. However, they shared sweepstakes with East Chicago Dyer High School. After the marching season the members traded practice places from the football field to the music room, and they once more became the Concert Band. Preparing for concerts and the spring NISBOVA contest occupied the instrumentalists' time for the next few months. During this time the band received the announcement that they had been elected to be a First Chair of America band for the second consecutive year a distinction which ranked them among the top bands of the nation.

Earn Distinctions for Concert Band and Orchestra

Strains of "West Side Story" and Schubert's "Symphony No. 7" could be heard resounding through the corridors near Room 119 during the fourth period. North Side's orchestra made many gains, not only in the number of instrumentalists this year, but also in quality. Under the direction of Mr. C. William Hatt, the orchestra was honored by being elected to the First Chair of America for the first time in its history, placing the Redskin musicians among the leading orchestras in the nation.

Much time was spent on working toward the NISBOVA band and orchestra contest April 20, while the string members journeyed to North Manchester for the annual string festival. Even with all of these outside activities, the musicians found time to give their regular concerts.

Twirlers, Varsity Band Perform for Game Audiences

Holding phosphorescent cardboard witch doctor's teeth was only one of the duties of this years twirling squad. Under the direction of drum major, David Myers, the twirlers marched at the head of the band and assisted the band in its formations during the football season. The twirlers' work was not completed, however, when the band stopped marching. The squad merely moved inside to the gymnasium where they began to practice for the half-time shows which they gave at all of the home basketball games. Under the leadership of the head majorette, Carol Johnson, the entire group presented twirling, pom pom, and drill routines and individuals also participated in trios and duets.

Wearing white shirts, black slacks, and red derbies, Varsity Band members marched their way to a second division rating in the NISBOVA marching contest. They were able to become a marching band as well as assume many other new responsibilities because of the additional practice gained from meeting daily this year. Playing for the pep sessions and basketball games with a new duty which was inherited from the Concert Band. Another function of the Varsity Band was participation in the Music Department's concerts. Mr. C. W. Hatt, the conductor, also entered the band into the spring NISBOVA contest. The termination of all of the members' hard work was tryouts for the Concert Band.

Premise, "Singing for Girls Only," Proved False

A false premise is finally being disproved. With help from the "Big Brothers" — Triple Trio members who sing, teach, and further music interest in the Boys' Choir — Miss Jeanette Rich is proving that singing is not just for girls. Evidence of this is the largest Boys' Choir membership since the installation of the group as a regular feature of the vocal department.

Girls' Choir serves as the other voice training period. Because any girl may join and membership consequently grows so large, standards for the advanced choir, A Cappella, are difficult to meet. A solo performance, an oral sight test, and an examination on music theory constitute a try out, a prerequisite for admission. If selected to A Cappella, students may be asked to join the madrigal groups, Chansonettes and Triple Trio.

Something there is in an athlete that doesn't like to lose. It is this element, a combination of spirit, pride and determination, which is the backbone of all Redskin teams. This component provides the drive of a basketball player, the stamina of a runner, the endurance of a gridster.

Competition, the basis for all athletics, thrives on the desire of a team to win; and fighting spirit is often as important a factor as skill in deciding the outcome of a clash between two teams.

The enthusiasm which sweeps through a football stadium or a basketball gymnasium, filling the spectators with school spirit, is another form of this combination of emotions. Indeed, school spirit is often the most important form, for the chanting and yelling of the fans frequently instills in an athlete the ability to jump a few inches higher or run a little faster.

Even though the athletes try their hardest and the fans yell their loudest, victory is not always achieved. The ability to lose graciously is equally as important as the ability to win.

Prosperous Football Campaigns

North's gridders once more had to face the grueling schedule of the Northern Indiana Conference, resulting in a season that yielded more bruises than championships. Blocking and tackling, basic fundamentals of the game, proved to be the shortcomings of the team. With a losing start and an injury-riddled finish, the team ended the season with an 1-8 record. This grim record, though, did not show the complete picture of the team.

Head Coach Bill Williams' charges opened the season with losses at the hands of several of the best teams in the state. Injuries to key performers in these contests resulted in a general demoralization of the team.

As a result of the lack of experienced manpower, Coach Williams was forced to experiment with fresh underclass talent. Many sophomores and juniors, seeing their first varsity action, had to take over the load of starting assignments against some of the top teams in the state. The underclassmen responded well, proving themselves capable of good football. A good underclass backfield and line foretold a brighter future for next season.

North's reserve football team completed its second straight winning season with five victories and only one loss. The lone loss in the hard fought campaign came at the hands of the Central Catholic "B" team. The North Siders almost won this contest, but an intercepted pass in the closing minutes stymied their bid. The reserves showed a strong line and a good backfield; this coupled with a great desire to win and learn should give the Redskins strong gridiron representation in coming seasons. Some of the reserves saw varsity action late in the season and have already proved their capabilities. Under reserve coach By Hey the boys showed much promise and should make welcome additions to next year's varsity squad.

Racqueteers Net Six Triumphs, Finish Third in NIC

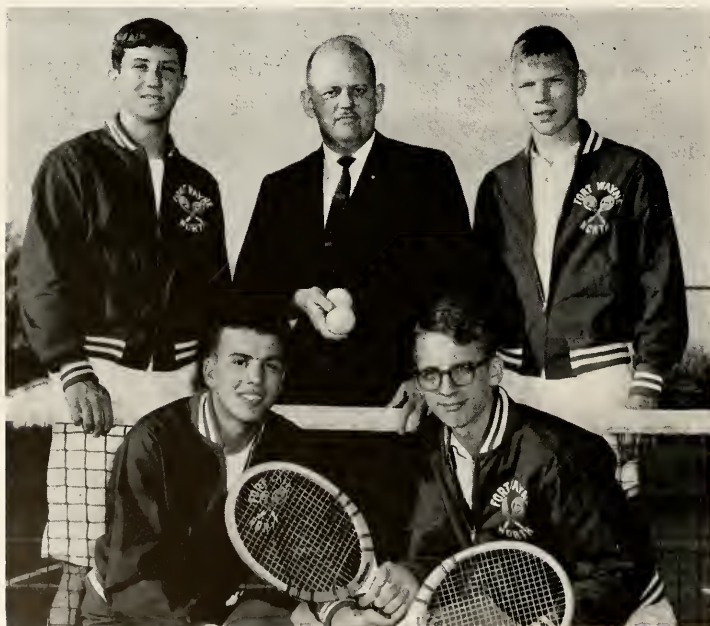

The North netters, led by coach Myron Henderson, completed one of their finest seasons in recent years. The Redskins opened their schedule impressively with five straight shutout victories, only to suffer two defeats by Goshen and Elkhart, and finally finished third in the rugged Eastern Division of the Northern Indiana Conference with a record of six wins and two losses. A main factor in the squad's success was the over-all steady play of four senior lettermen, Greg Meister, Tom DeLong, Phil Brewer, and Steve Pence. Two underclass lettermen and a talented reserve team also brightened the season.

Swimming and Golf Added to Varsity Sports Agenda

Swimmers, to your marks! Red tankmen take to the water in a practice session.

Golf whiz Dave Schumaker shows his grip to Don Meyer and Jeff Michell.

Two new varsity sports, golf and swimming, were added to the North Side athletic curriculum this year. While the swim group was only able to compete in one regulation meet during the season, the golf squad played a full eight match schedule, with home-at-home pairings with Central Catholic, South, Garrett, Elmhurst.

The new links contingent played its home matches on the Elks Country Club course. Providing the supervision and instruction for the golf team was Dome chemistry instructor Beryl Lewis.

Operating on a trial basis for this season only, Mr. Harold Clinkenbeard's tankmen competed only in the sectional tournament at South Bend. Eight Redskins participated in this event, with the medley relay team finishing sixth. With the team being composed mainly of sophomores and juniors this season, the swimming prospects look bright for the Redskins in the future.

Wins and Second Place in Conference

The Redskins cross country team, although somewhat less successful than had been expected, completed a winning season which included a city championship. The team was led by junior Dave Esterline and senior Steve Konow, who finished one-two in nearly every meet, and featured consistent running by Dana Failor, Bob Milton, Bill Davis, and Randy Harter. This potent combination won thirteen consecutive meets before falling to the undefeated Elkhart Blue Blazers.

In addition to the city championship, the Redskin harriers also finished second in the Northern Indiana Conference, East-West championship meet. The team chased Valparaiso to the wire in the field of twenty-two teams. Esterline and Konow again led the North Siders with third and fourth place finishes.

In the sectional meet at Franke Park, North finished second to Ashley and qualified for the regionals at Anderson. Esterline and Konow again were one-two in the sectional. In the regionals the Redskins ran one of their poorer races and failed to qualify for the state meet. Esterline, second in the regionals, was the only Redskin to make the trip to Indianapolis, finishing twenty-ninth in the state field of approximately one hundred runners. With several good juniors and sophomores running on the varsity and with an excellent reserve team, the Redskins show great potential for next season.

Randy Harter lengthens his lead as other Redskin harriers attempt to overtake him.

In a pinch? No, that's dribbling ace Steve Esterline taking on three Elkhart Blazers and coming out two points the better.

Mike Painter, rebound specialist, made up for a lack of height by out thinking opponents and hitting a high percentage of shots.

Hoopsters Defeat Central

One of the most exciting basketball seasons in recent years featured the 1962-63 sports year. For the first time since 1955, North's Redskins reached the final game in the sectional tournament, only to lose to Concordia. The Redskins' season was a strange one, featured by no long winning streaks but likewise featured by no long losing streaks. A Redskin team that lost three times to Concordia still had enough fight to whip Central's city championship Tigers and Michigan City, one of the state's top-ranking fives.

The team finished the season with a 12-11 record, competing against some of the state's toughest competition. The Red-and-White dropped its last two city and conference games to finish fourth in both loops. North had a 4-3 record in the city and was 5-4 in the Northern Indiana Conference. The well-balanced scoring attack, featured by five men with over 150 points, averaged 65.4 points a game, while the defense gave up 63.6 points a contest.

Dave Schumaker and Steve Esterline led the team offensively with 372 and 337 points, respectively. Mike Painter and Jack Fry were the top rebounders. Fry was also the top shooter on the squad, connecting on fifty per cent of his field goal attempts and 86 per cent of his shots from the free throw line.

Dave Schumaker leaps high over opposing Central Catholic players to tip in two points.

Untarnished City Play Highlight of Reserve Season

According to the saying, "The best offense is a good defense." This was proven true by the Redskin reserves last season, as they held their opponents to an average of 36 points per game, while managing an average of 43 points per game themselves. With a sticky defense and a fast breaking offense, the team was able to turn a close game into an easy victory with key steals and recoveries. Leading in this department with 91 recoveries was Steve Bulmahn, followed closely by Dave Moser with 84.

The team's balanced scoring contributed greatly to their 15 and 4 record. Mike Bedree was leading scorer with 176 points. Right behind him with 171 was Steve Bulmahn. Next came Dave Moser with 130, Rick Thompson with 126, and Steve Monnet with 99.

One of the highlights of the season was their 37 to 35 overtime win over Kokomo on the Kat's home floor. According to Coach Frederick, their best game of the season was their second contest against Central, when the reserves walked off with a 48 to 32 decision.

Pulling down rebounds and drawing fouls at the same time is quite a feat, but sophomore netter Mike Bedree seems to have the situation well in hand.

Preparing the home uniforms for the sectional tournament are equipment managers Joe Culver, Dave Friderich, Mr. John Peterink, Larry Ellenwood, and Jack Bostick.

Managers Prove Themselves To Be Backbone of Teams

Keeping North Side's athletes well-equipped is the job of the Redskins' able staff of student managers. Under the direction of head equipment manager, Mr. John Peterink, the staff cleans all equipment, checks it out to the athletes, and keeps careful records of all equipment in use. Seniors Lou Bojrab and Paul DeFrain head the equipment managers, assisted by sophomore Jack Smith and junior Jack Bostick.

Caring for the athlete's welfare while he is on the field is the task of the field managers. The football managers were Steve Neumann, Carl Geist, and Jim Hatfield; Dave Heffley and Larry Walter assisted the cross country team. Basketball managers were Larry Ellenwood, David Friedrich, and Joe Culver. The track managers are Neal Nagle and Larry Walter. Athletic director, Mr. Rolla Chambers, comments, "This year we have the best bunch of managers I can ever recall. They are efficient, hard workers, doing everything exactly as the coaches want them to."

Neil Nagle and Larry Walter adjust the starting blocks for Don Schaffer's practice run.

School Spirit Abounds As Yell Leaders Guide Cheers

Leading organized hysteria for Redskin athletes were Kay Nemyer, Cheryl Evers, Marilyn Mutch, Sue Riley, and Linda Darnell.

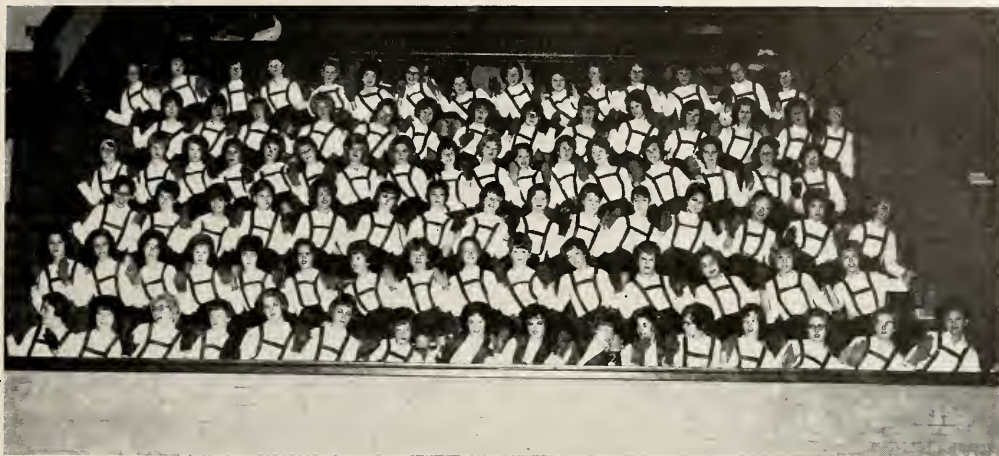

"We're from North Side! Couldn't be prouder!" yell these squaws.

Aided by the two cheerblocks, Girls' with a membership of 108, and Boys' with a membership of around 275, in organizing the students' enthusiasm, this year's varsity quintet composed of Marilyn Mutch, captain, Cheryl Evers, Linda Darnell, Kay Nemyer, and Sue Riley, cheered the teams onto victorious seasons. Whether our team was winning or losing, they could feel and know that the student body was behind them all the way and all the time by the rousing cheers and favorite chants such as "Let's Go."

Keeping spirits high during the preliminary games were the reserve cheerleaders, captain Georgia Barnett, Nancy Fowler, Paula Noll, and Ardis Witmer. Abetting the varsity squad by joining forces with them on several cheers, the reserves added depth and color to the numerous pep-sessions.

The outstandably commendable cheerblocks were truly a worthy representation of North's sportsman-like conduct at all athletic events. The blocks were highly praised by many teachers, non-participating students, and other competing schools. They did more for keeping morales up and attitudes respectable than any other person or group of persons attending and witnessing the events.

Spirit at the games is very important and the girls' cheerblock, besides adding color to the pep session and games with their white blouses and red suspenders, also gave the team a boost with their encouraging cheers and chants.

Reserve Squad, Cheerblock Adds to Game Atmosphere

Reserve cheerleaders this year were Paula Noll, Ardis Witmer, Nancy Fowler, and Georgia Barnett.

Rolla Chambers Closes Career As Running Redskins

Mr. Chambers checks over a sampling of the various correspondence required in his duties as athletic director.

After thirty-three years as North's track bossman, coach Rolla P. Chambers announced his retirement at the close of this season. Chambers, who has been head of the athletic department since 1942, has produced four championship teams during his tenure: 1941, 1942, 1956, and 1957.

Speaking about this year's cinder contingent, Chambers said, "I would say that the '63 team compares very favorably with some of the best teams we've ever had. We have some fine possibilities."

The Chambermen showed strong potential in the 440-yard dash, the 880-yard run, and the mile run. Top cinder prospect in the 440 was senior Ed Haught. The Konow brothers, Steve and Tom clicked off consistent good times in the middle distance, while Dave Esterline was a junior standout in the mile run. Redskin relay combinations, featured Dale Yoder, John Ransburg, Steve Bulkin, and Jim Erwin in the half; and Ed Haught, Mike Painter, Don Bradley, Herb Summers in the mile.

Sprint, Hurdle, Jump to Track Triumphs

Exhausted, but several strides ahead of their nearest competitor are 440-specialists Ed Haight and Don Bradley.

Coach Rolla Chambers discusses plans for upcoming meet with his trackmen before a practice.

Dick Schmidt displays his winning form as he easily clears the high jump bar. Dick and Steve Esterline provided the high jump combo for the Redskins this year.

Mural Games Offer Exercise, Competition for Boys

Don Bradley strengthens muscles on the horizontal bar doing isometrics.

Designed to give those boys not involved in varsity sports chances to compete against each other, the North Side intramural program offers the opportunity to participate in nine different sports.

In the autumn and spring, emphasis is on outdoor sports. Amateur athletes swing golf clubs or softball bats or chase footballs in the individual and team competition. Track and field events give the would-be harriers excellent chances to test their speed and stamina.

With the approach of winter, activity moves indoors. Basketball leagues are established for boys with periods 6B and 7 free, and volleyball teams also battle each other. Those who prefer to compete individually may participate in table tennis or swimming matches. One of the newest and most popular intramural programs is the bowling league, which meets on Monday after school at a local bowling alley.

The opportunity to receive medals and the possibility of receiving a letter by compiling enough points on intramurals serve as stimuli for participation in the program.

This hoop action demonstrates the desire evidenced by boys in basketball.

Intramural director Don Kemp posts another notice for Redskin boys of an upcoming bowling match.

Volleyball, along with basketball and softball, was one of the competitive sports popular with boys in the intramural program.

Boys' Gym Classes Emphasize Co-ordination, Muscles

One of the favorite pastimes of boys' gym classes is "roughhouse," a game which emphasizes strength and wrestling skill.

"Breathe deeply," says Mr. Kemp, finding a pupil's chest expansion.

Running "the bridge," swimming the length of the pool underwater, and dodging a hard-thrown volleyball are only some of the many activities pursued by the sophomore boys in the physical education classes. Phased in three separate divisions — sports and games, swimming, and physical development — the physical education program is designed to help Redskin males determine their physical capabilities and build muscle development and co-ordination.

Boys are separated into the three divisions — A, B, and C — according to their scores on a series of physical aptitude tests given at the beginning of the semester. While one group swims in Mr. Harold Clinkenbeard's class, another group would be straining on weights and running the stairs in the gym. In swimming classes both the swimmers and the non-swimmers are taught basic fundamentals and learn to apply what they have learned. The body-building classes of Mr. Don Kemp concentrate on running, weight-lifting, and elementary forms of gymnastics. The third group, under the direction of Mr. By Hey and Mr. Bill Williams, participates in games as well as exercising. Some of the sports followed in this group are basketball, volleyball, and softball. A rather unusual "sport" is "roughhouse," where only the strongest remain in the center circle after minutes of hectic struggling.

Games, Exercise Part of Girls' Physical Education

A fast game of volleyball did wonders in dissolving tensions from the subjects requiring brain power.

Feminine voices heard in the upper decibals probably came from the girls' gymnasium or the athletic field where two and three times a week sophomore members of the fair sex attempt to preserve their fairness by engaging in physical exercise. This year the lasses concentrated on speed-away, modern dancing, rope jumping skills, individual sports, and stunts on a balance beam which the department borrowed. The classes were enhanced by a set of new mats used for tumbling skills. Miss Ruth Carroll, who specialized in physical education, conducted most of these classes.

Miss Janice Michiels worked with several phys ed classes but also spent time teaching her beginning, intermediate, and advanced swimmers the elements of paddling, stroking, and diving. Highlighting this year's classes was a visit from a representative of the YMCA who demonstrated scuba diving and let the girls try out his air tanks, flippers, and snorkles.

In keeping with the national concern about physical fitness, girls' physical education classes emphasized regular exercise, but with an additional accent on exercise for pleasure and relaxation, two necessities of life in the modern world.

Poise and balance acquired in jumping rope were reflected later in walking and dancing.

Twenty years from now someone will open this book. Perhaps that moment will occur out of curiosity, perhaps out of a yearning to remember. Whatever the reason for opening, the memories contained within will make closing it a little hard, if that person is the one reading this copy now.

For, to contain memories, to record a year in 160 pages, has been the goal of the Legend staff. We have peered and probed into just about every nook and cranny in the Dome, taking pictures, asking questions, trying to find what has made this year unique.

Undoubtedly the cover will collect dust with the years, the ink on the signatures may fade, but the efforts put forth by 27 juniors and seniors, most of whom were new to publications work, will remain a part of the reader's past, your past.

For despite all our efforts, it will be the last time we will see many of our fellow seniors. To us they will always appear as we saw them last—young, crewcut or pixiecut and friendly. Through all the years they will remain youthful in a kind of never-never land, to which only we and they hold the key.
